Events: The 50bps BRR cut by PBOC triggered a significant rebound in China developers last week. However, we expect that they were speculative plays at current stage as intensifying price competition accompanying sluggish demand will continue in Dec. The developers will unveil their monthly sales performances for Nov from this week.

Comments:

- High gearing developers led the rebound but should be short term: Evergrande(3333), Shima Property(813), R&F Properties(2007) and Poly HK(119) rebounded 15.1-15.3% after the BRR cut move was released at 30 Nov. The net debt/equity for these 4 stocks ranges 75.3-99.9%. Markets expect that these high gearing developers will benefit most from the BRR cut, which is bias in our view. Given the gloomy outlook of the developers, it is unreasonable to lend to the over leveraged and hence high risk developers using the limited new loan quota from the view of the banks' perspective.
- Volume is the only key factor in the short term: For developers, we haven't seen any loosen signals from central government, other than those fine-tuning polices to avoid over turbulence of the economy. We believe the sales volume is the only key factor in the short term for the sector which may indicate the bottom of the fundamentals.
- Fundamentals remain challenging in Nov-Dec. According to the telephone conference with the management of Evergrande(3333), Sunac(1918) and Fantasia(1777), the developers were in cash raising mode with projects in the outskirt areas offering the most discounts but the demand were sluggish. We expect a disappointed sales performance from developers in the short term. The developers will unveil their monthly sales performance for Nov from this week.
